

Give Them Heroes

Who do your children admire? Are their aspirations aimed toward a sports hero, a rock star, or a celebrity? Our children need better heroes than these, and you can raise their sights by encouraging them to read biographies of real men and women who have lived lives of faithfulness to God.

Biography is history, and guards us against the “chronological snobbery” C. S. Lewis warned us about. It is also adventure and suspense, for which we have a natural hunger. It is psychology and personal experience, and is even theology, as we see how others have lived out their faith.

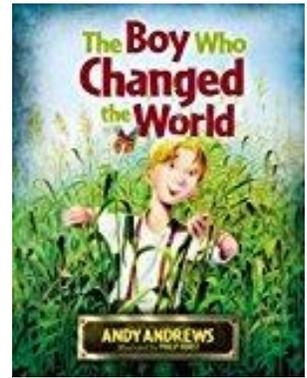

To find children's books in the library, walk in and circle around to the left, behind the library desk. You can select books geared specifically for your own children's ages. The books on the "Middle School" shelves are also appropriate for teens and adults to enjoy.

PICTURE BOOKS

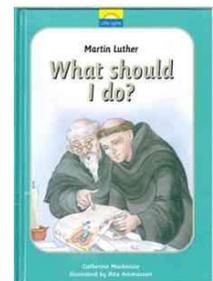

Squanto and the Miracle of Thanksgiving, by Eric Metaxas (E METAXAS) Squanto was captured by the British and sold into slavery in Spain. But, God brought him to faith and ultimately returned him to the New World to become a guide and friend for the Pilgrims.

The Boy Who Changed the World (E ANDREWS) This true story shows how one ordinary boy came to develop 'super plants' that helped save billions of people from starvation.

ELEMENTARY AGES

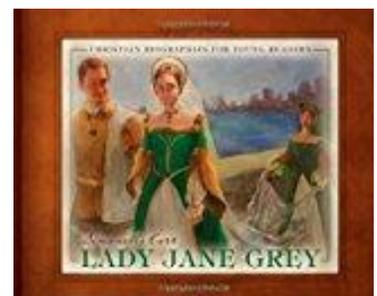

Martin Luther: What Should I Do? (J 921 LUTHER) Young Martin thought that he had to pray for hours on end, eat very little, and study a great many good books in order to have his sins forgiven. However, it was God's Word that showed him that the Lord Jesus had done it all.

Jim Elliot: A Light for God (J 921 ELLIOT) Jim loved God and the outdoors, so he was excited to share God's love in the jungles of South America.

Lady Jane Grey (J 921 GREY) The Reformation wasn't just about men. Here's a courageous young lady who stood up for her faith. This is part of a series that's great for families to read together.
